REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION OF THE MAGISTRATE JUDGE

On May 26, 2016, Petitioner Xavier Omar Martinez-Layton (“Martinez-Layton”) filed a Motion to Vacate, Set Aside, or Correct his Sentence, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. Dkt. No. 1.

The Court has an independent obligation to review the record and the pleadings. Rule 4(b) of the RULES GOVERNING SECTION 2255 PROCEEDINGS. After reviewing the record and relevant case law, the Court RECOMMENDS Martinez-Layton’s motion be DISMISSED, because Martinez-Layton waived his right to file this petition. Furthermore, if not waived, Martinez-Layton’s claims are legally and substantively meritless and should be DENIED.

I. Procedural and Factual Background

On March 11, 2014, a federal grand jury – sitting in Brownsville, Texas, – indicted Martinez-Layton for illegally re-entering the United States after having been previously deported¹, a violation of 8 U.S.C. §§1326(a) and 1326(b). U.S. v. Martinez-Layton, Criminal No. 1:14-148-1, Dkt. No. 6 (hereinafter “CR”).

¹ While the indictment alleged that Martinez-Layton had been convicted of a felony, that prior felony conviction is a sentencing factor, not an element of the offense under 8 U.S.C. § 1326. U.S. v. Pineda-Arellano, 492 F.3d 624, 625 (5th Cir. 2007). Accordingly, the inclusion of the allegation of a prior felony was “mere surplusage.” U.S. v. Granados, 355 Fed. App’x. 823 (5th Cir. 2009)(unpubl.).

A. Rearraignment & Waiver of Appellate Rights

On July 29, 2014, Martinez-Layton appeared before the Magistrate Judge and entered a guilty plea to illegally re-entering the United States. CR Dkt. No. 18. His guilty plea was pursuant to a written plea agreement. Dkt. No. 20.

Martinez-Layton's written plea agreement indicates that he knowingly and voluntarily waived his appellate rights. CR Dkt. No. 20, ¶ 11

Paragraph 11 of the plea agreement provides:

Defendant is aware that Title 18, United States Code, § 3742, affords a defendant the right to appeal the conviction and sentence imposed. The defendant agrees to waive the right to appeal the sentence imposed or the manner it was determined on any grounds set forth in Title 18 U.S.C. § 3742. Additionally, the defendant is aware that Title 28, United States Code, § 2255, affords the right to contest or “collaterally attack” a conviction or sentence after the conviction or sentence has become final. The defendant knowingly and voluntarily waives the right to contest his/her conviction or sentence by means of any post-conviction proceeding. If the defendant files a notice of appeal following the imposition of sentence, the government will seek specific performance of this provision.

CR Dkt. No. 20, ¶ 11 (emphasis original)

The Magistrate Judge issued a report and recommendation, which recommended that the District Judge accept Martinez-Layton's guilty plea. CR Dkt. No. 18.

B. Sentencing & Direct Appeal

In the final presentence report (“PSR”), Martinez-Layton was assessed a base offense level of eight for illegally re-entering the United States. CR Dkt. No. 22, p. 5. Martinez-Layton was assessed a 16-level enhancement for a previous conviction for a crime of violence, namely three separate convictions for burglary of a habitation in a Texas state court. Id. Martinez-Layton received a three-level reduction for acceptance of responsibility. Id., p. 6. Thus, Martinez-Layton was accessed a total offense level of 21.

Regarding his criminal history, Martinez-Layton had eleven adult criminal convictions and was assessed 22 criminal history points. CR Dkt. No. 22, pp. 6-14. Martinez-Layton was assessed an additional two criminal history points because he was on federal supervised release at the time he committed the instant offense. Id. Martinez-Layton was assessed 24 total criminal history points, resulting in a criminal history category of VI. Based upon Martinez-Layton's offense level of 21 and criminal history category of VI, the presentence report identified a guideline sentencing range of 77 to 96 months of imprisonment. Id., p. 18.

On January 23, 2015, Martinez-Layton, through counsel, filed a motion for a non-guideline sentence, noting that Martinez-Layton entered the United States to escape threats from the drug cartels and because the calculation of his criminal history overstated his actual dangerousness to the community. CR Dkt. No. 33.

On January 29, 2015, the District Court adopted the Magistrate Judge's report and recommendation, accepting Martinez-Layton's guilty plea. CR Dkt. No. 34. On that same day, the District Court granted Martinez-Layton's motion for a non-guideline sentence and sentenced him to 57 months of imprisonment, three years of supervised release, and a $100 special assessment fee, which was ordered remitted. CR Dkt. No. 36. The judgment was entered on February 13, 2015. Id.

Neither the District Court docket nor the Fifth Circuit docket reflect the filing of a direct appeal. A notice of appeal must be filed within fourteen (14) days from the entry of judgment. See FED. R. APP. P. 4(b)(1)(A), 26(a)(2). Therefore, Martinez-Layton's deadline for filing a notice of direct appeal passed on February 27, 2015. Id.

C. Motion to Vacate, Set Aside or Correct Sentence Pursuant to § 2255

On May 26, 2016, Martinez-Layton timely² filed a motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255, requesting that the District Court vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence. Dkt. No. 1. In his motion, Martinez-Layton asserts that his sentence was unlawfully enhanced under the Armed Career Criminal Act ("ACCA") because he was subject to the residual clause that was deemed unconstitutional in Johnson v. U.S., 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015). Dkt. No. 1, p. 4.

Pursuant to Rule 4(b) of the RULES GOVERNING SECTION 2255 PROCEEDINGS, because the petition is meritless on its face, the Court has not ordered the Government to respond to it.

II. Applicable Law

A. Section 2255

Martinez-Layton seeks relief pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. Dkt. No. 1. That section provides, as relevant here:

(a) A prisoner in custody under sentence of a court established by Act of Congress claiming the right to be released upon the ground that the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, or that the court was without jurisdiction to impose such sentence, or that the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law, or is otherwise subject to collateral attack, may move the court which imposed the sentence to vacate, set aside or correct the sentence.

Where a petitioner exhausts or waives his direct appeal, the Court is entitled to presume that he was fairly convicted. U.S. v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 164 (1982); U.S. v. Willis, 273 F.3d 592, 595 (5th Cir. 2001). A petitioner who seeks to challenge a final conviction by collateral attack, can do so on constitutional or jurisdictional grounds. 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a); U.S. v. Shaid, 937 F.2d 228, 233 (5th Cir. 1991). Generally, a petitioner may not raise on collateral attack issues that he failed to raise on direct appeal, absent a showing that the error constituted a “fundamental defect which inherently results in a complete miscarriage of justice.” U.S. v. Addonizio, 442 U.S. 178, 185 (1979); Hill v. U.S., 368 U.S. 424, 428 (1962).

III. Analysis

A court may entertain and decide a § 2255 motion without requiring the production of the prisoner at a hearing. 28 U.S.C. § 2255. Further, a district court may deny a § 2255 motion without an evidentiary hearing “only if the motion, files, and records of the case conclusively show the prisoner is entitled to no relief.” U.S. v. Bartholomew, 974 F.2d 39, 41 (5th Cir. 1992). The record in this case satisfies this requirement, for which reason the motion can be decided without a hearing.

In analyzing Martinez-Layton’s claim, the Court is required to construe allegations by pro se litigants liberally, to ensure that their claims are given fair and meaningful consideration, despite their unfamiliarity with the law. Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520 (1972). Even applying this standard, neither the record – nor the law – support Martinez-Layton’s claim.

A. Waiver of Appellate Rights

Martinez-Layton waived his right to appeal or collaterally attack his sentence when he entered into the plea agreement with the United States. This waiver bars reliefs under 28 U.S.C. § 2255. U.S. v. Wilkes, 20 F.3d 651, 653 (5th Cir. 1994).³

“A defendant may waive his statutory right to appeal as part of a valid plea agreement, provided (1) his or her waiver is knowing and voluntary, and (2) the waiver applies to the circumstances at hand, based on the plain language of the agreement.” U.S. v. Rodriguez-Estrada, 741 F.3d 648, 650 (5th Cir. 2014). In order for the waiver to be knowing and voluntary, “a defendant must know that he had a right to appeal his sentence, and that he was giving up that right.” U.S. v. Portillo, 18 F.3d 290, 292 (5th Cir. 1994).

The record clearly indicates that Martinez-Layton knowingly and voluntarily waived his appellate rights. Martinez-Layton’s plea agreement expressly states that he was aware of his right to directly appeal his sentence pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3742, and his right to collaterally attack his conviction and sentence, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. CR Dkt. No. 20. That same paragraph also indicates that Martinez-Layton agreed to waive those rights.

Martinez-Layton has not provided any evidence to indicate that he was unaware of or misunderstood any of the terms within the plea agreement; or evidence to indicate that he pled guilty involuntarily. Consequently, the record establishes, without a doubt, that ³ While the Court has not required the United States to reply to Martinez-Layton’s petition, the Court “is entitled to conclude that the government wishes what it bargained for.” U.S. v. Del Toro-Alejandre, 489 F.3d 721, 723-24 (5th Cir. 2007). Even if Martinez-Layton’s had not waived his appellate rights, the practical result would be no different, as his claims are substantively meritless.

Martinez-Layton's waiver was knowingly and voluntarily made.

Moreover, Martinez-Layton's waiver clearly applies to this case. Martinez-Layton is attempting to collaterally attack his conviction and sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255, an avenue expressly foreclosed by his plea agreement. Therefore, the waiver should be enforced and the case should be dismissed based upon that waiver.

Even if Martinez-Layton had not waived his right to collaterally attack his conviction, his petition is meritless and should be denied.

B. Johnson is Inapplicable

Martinez-Layton asserts that he is entitled to habeas relief in light of the recent Supreme Court decision Johnson v. U.S., 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015). For the reasons discussed below, Johnson does not apply to Martinez-Layton's case, because he was not sentenced under the Armed Career Criminal Act ("ACCA").

In Johnson, the Supreme Court reviewed the lower court's application of 18 U.S.C. § 924(e), the ACCA. The ACCA requires a 15-year mandatory minimum term of imprisonment for anyone who violates § 922(g), having three or more prior convictions for a "serious drug offense" or a "violent felony." § 924(e)(1). The ACCA defines a "violent felony" as any crime that "is burglary, arson, or extortion, involves the use of explosives, or otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious potential risk of physical injury to another." § 924(e)(2)(B) (emphasis added). The underlined portion of § 924(e)(2)(B) has been referred to as the Act's residual clause. Johnson, 135 S. Ct. at 2556.

Ultimately, the Supreme Court held that imposing an increased sentence under the ACCA's residual clause is a violation of due process. Johnson, 135 S. Ct. at 2557 (reasoning that the residual clause was unconstitutionally vague because it "denies fair notice to defendants and invites arbitrary enforcement by judges."). The Supreme Court has confirmed the retroactivity of Johnson as applied to the ACCA. See Welch v. U.S., 136 S. Ct. 1257 (2016) (holding that "Johnson announced a new substantive rule that has retroactive effect in cases on collateral review").

While this is the theory urged by Martinez-Layton, none of it applies to his case.

Martinez-Layton was not sentenced under the ACCA, which applies only to convictions for unlawfully possessing a firearm under 18 U.S.C. § 922(g). 18 U.S.C. § 924(e). Instead, he was convicted of violating 8 U.S.C. §§1326(a) and (b). CR Dkt. No. 15. Furthermore, the court did not apply any enhancement in relation to the use or possession of a firearm. CR Dkt. No. 36. Therefore, regardless of its retroactive application, the holding in Johnson does not directly provide Martinez-Layton with a vehicle for relief.

C. Gonzalez-Longoria Affords No Relief

Martinez-Layton makes the related argument that he is entitled to habeas relief because the Supreme Court's analysis of the residual clause in Johnson applies equally to the term "crime of violence" as contained in 18 U.S.C. § 16. Dkt. No. 1. Section 16 defines a "crime of violence" as

- (a) an offense that has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or
- (b) any other offense that is a felony and that, by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense.

A Fifth Circuit panel recently addressed this issue in U.S. v. Gonzalez-Longoria, 813 F.3d 225 (5th Cir. 2016). There, the panel concluded that the statutory definition of "crime of violence" found at 18 U.S.C. § 16 is also unconstitutionally vague, because it "requires courts both to imagine an ordinary/archetypical case and then to judge that imagined case against [an] imprecise standard." Gonzalez, 813 F.3d at 235.

Any relief that Martinez-Layton may have found in that decision was short-lived; the panel opinion was withdrawn and the case was considered by the Fifth Circuit en banc.⁴

The Fifth Circuit, sitting en banc, unequivocally held that "18 U.S.C. § 16(b) is not unconstitutionally vague." U.S. v. Gonzalez-Longoria, — F.3d —, 2016 WL 4169127, at *1 (5th Cir. Aug. 5, 2016) (en banc). Accordingly, even if § 16(b) applied to his case, Martinez-

⁴ 813 F.3d 225 (5th Cir. 2016)(discussing the application of U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2(b)(1)(c), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(43), and 18 U.S.C. § 16, and finding 18 U.S.C. § 16 to be unconstitutionally vague), reh'g en banc ordered, 815 F.3d 189.

Layton is entitled to no relief under Gonzalez-Longoria. As discussed further below, despite Martinez-Layton's continued focus upon the "crime of violence" language as set forth in the ACCA and in 18 U.S.C. § 16(b), his sentence was not enhanced pursuant to either. Instead, Martinez-Layton's sentence was enhanced pursuant to the term "crime of violence," as defined in the sentencing guidelines.⁵

D. Sentencing Guidelines Enhancement

An examination of Martinez-Layton's sentence clearly shows that there was no error. Pursuant to U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2(b)(1)(A)(ii), a 16 level enhancement was added to Martinez-Layton's offense level, because he had a prior felony conviction for a crime of violence. CR Dkt. No. 22.

The Sentencing Guidelines provision set forth that a defendant – who is convicted of illegal re-entry – is subject to a 16-level sentencing enhancement, if he has a previous conviction for a crime of violence. U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2. The Sentencing Guidelines expressly identify "burglary of a dwelling" as a crime of violence. U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2, comment n.1(B)(iii).

The mere labeling of an offense as burglary of a dwelling, however, is insufficient to warrant the application of the 16 level enhancement imposed by § 2L1.2. U.S. v. Mohr, 554 F.3d 604, 610 (5th Cir. 2009) ("The elements of state offenses determine whether a prior offense was a crime of violence under federal law, not labels under state law."). Instead, the Court must first look to the elements of the crime of conviction, to determine if those elements "are the same as or narrower than those of the generic offense of burglary of a dwelling." U.S. v. Conde-Castaneda, 753 F.3d 172, 175 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 311, 190 L. Ed. 2d 225 (2014).

The relevant portions of the Texas burglary of a habitation statute provide:

- (a) A person commits an offense if, without the effective consent of the owner, the person:
 - (1) enters a habitation, or a building (or any portion of a building) not then open to the public, with intent to commit a felony, theft, or an assault; or
 - (2) remains concealed, with intent to commit a felony, theft, or an assault, in a building or habitation; or
 - (3) enters a building or habitation and commits or attempts to commit a felony, theft, or an assault.

Texas Penal Code § 30.02(a).

Thus, there are three different types of offense set forth in this statute. The Fifth Circuit has concluded that a conviction under section 30.02(a)(1) meets the generic elements of burglary of a dwelling. U.S. v. Garcia-Mendez, 420 F.3d 454, 456-57 (5th Cir. 2005). The Fifth Circuit has also held that a conviction under section (a)(3) does not meet those elements, because it lacks an element of intent. U.S. v. Constante, 544 F.3d 584, 587 (5th Cir. 2008).⁶

The distinguishing factor, as set forth in the Fifth Circuit's analysis, is whether the defendant entered the habitation with the intent to commit a crime. If the person enters the building with the intent to commit one of the listed offenses, then the act constitutes a crime of violence. On the other hand, if the entry was committed, and then – after the entry was effected – the intent to commit one of the listed offenses was formed, the offense does not qualify as a crime of violence.

In order to determine if Martinez-Layton was convicted under section (a)(1) or section (a)(3), the Court may “look at so-called Shepard⁷ documents, which include the charging document, written judicial confession, and judgment.” Conde-Castaneda, 753 F.3d at 176

⁶ It does not appear that the Fifth Circuit has ever decided whether a conviction under Section (a)(2) qualifies as a crime of violence. That section, however, is not applicable to this case.

(footnote added).

In this case, Martinez-Layton's state court indictment charged that he entered a habitation "with intent to commit theft." CR Dkt. No. 35, p. 13. Martinez-Layton pled guilty to this charge as a second-degree felony. CR Dkt. No. 22, p. 11.

The Fifth Circuit recently decided a case with identical circumstances: an illegal re-entry defendant; who was convicted of the second-degree felony of burglary of a habitation; using the same language in the state court indictment. In that case, the Fifth Circuit held: (1) the defendant was convicted under section (a)(1); and (2) the crime of violence enhancement was applicable under U.S.S.G. 2L1.2(b)(1)(A)(ii). U.S. v. Hernandez-Borjas, No. 15-40190, 2016 WL 833395, at *5 (5th Cir. Mar. 3, 2016) (unpubl.). Accordingly, given the identical circumstances in the instant case, it seems clear that the enhancement was properly applied.⁸

Thus, Martinez-Layton's reliance on Johnson and its progeny, as a premise for relief, is factually and legally misplaced. For those reasons – if his petition is not dismissed as waived – his claim is meritless and should be denied.

IV. Recommendation

WHEREFORE it is RECOMMENDED that the Petitioner Xavier Omar Martinez-Layton's Motion to Vacate, Set Aside or Correct his Sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255, Dkt. No. 1, be DISMISSED as waived. Alternatively, the motion should be DENIED as meritless.

A. Certificate of Appealability

Unless a circuit justice or judge issues a Certificate of Appealability ("COA"), a petitioner may not appeal the denial of a § 2255 motion to the Fifth Circuit. 28 U.S.C. §

2253(a),(c)(1). A petitioner may receive a COA only if he makes a “substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” § 2253(c)(2); Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 336 (2003). To satisfy this standard, a petitioner must demonstrate that jurists of reason could disagree with the court’s resolution of his constitutional claims or that jurists could conclude that the issues presented are adequate to deserve encouragement to proceed further. Id. at 327; Moreno v. Dretke, 450 F.3d 158, 163 (5th Cir. 2006). A district court may sua sponte rule on a COA because the court that denies relief to a petitioner is in the best position to determine whether the petitioner has made a substantial showing of a denial of a constitutional right on the issues before the court. Alexander v. Johnson, 211 F.3d 895, 898 (5th Cir. 2000).

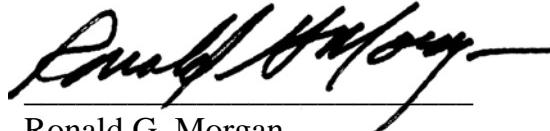

After reviewing Martinez-Layton’s § 2255 motion and the applicable Fifth Circuit precedent, the Court is confident that no outstanding issue would be debatable among jurists of reason. Although Martinez-Layton’s § 2255 motion raises issues that the Court has carefully considered, he fails to make a “substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). Accordingly, it is RECOMMENDED that a COA should be denied.

B. Notice to Parties

The parties have fourteen (14) days from the date of being served with a copy of this Report and Recommendation within which to file written objections, if any, with the Honorable Andrew S. Hanen, United States District Judge. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) (eff. Dec. 1, 2009). Failure to timely file objections shall bar the parties from a de novo determination by the District Judge of an issue covered in the report and shall bar the parties from attacking on appeal factual findings accepted or adopted by the district court, except upon grounds of plain error or manifest injustice. See § 636(b)(1); Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 149 (1985); Douglass v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 79 F.3d 1415, 1428-29 (5th Cir. 1996), superseded by statute on other grounds, 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) (extending the time to file objections from ten to fourteen days).
